A Stranger Next Door

隔壁的陌生人

Last Saturday, a young couple moved into the apartment next to ours. My mom said we should be friendly, so she asked me to bring them a box of pineapple cakes. I am a shy teenager, and I do not like talking to strangers. But I knocked on their door anyway.

A tall man opened the door with a big smile. His name was Mr. Lin, and his wife, Amy, was holding a cute baby girl. They invited me in like a guest and gave me a glass of juice. Mr. Lin was a great host. He told funny stories about his job as a firefighter. In our city, people like him are real heroes.

Now the Lins are more than neighbors to me. On weekends, Amy teaches me how to bake cookies, and I help them watch the baby. Mr. Lin says I am a genius with kids. I learned something important that day: a stranger is just a friend you have not met yet.
