Tom's Two-Thousand-Dollar Sneakers

Tom 的兩千元球鞋

Tom wanted a new pair of sneakers. The price was two thousand dollars, but he only had five hundred in his piggy bank. "Can you lend me some money?" he asked his older sister, Amy. Amy shook her head. "I won't lend you money, but I can teach you how to earn it."

For the next month, Tom worked hard. He washed his dad's car, walked the neighbor's dog, and sold his old comic books at a flea market. He also stopped buying bubble tea every day. He put every coin and every bill into a big jar. By the end of the month, he had saved enough cash.

At the shoe store, Tom paid for the sneakers and counted his change carefully. The shoes were still expensive, but now they felt special. "When you spend money you earned yourself, you think twice," Amy said. Tom smiled. He never borrowed money from anyone again.
