Taiwan, the Kingdom of Fruit

台灣，水果王國

Many visitors call Taiwan "the Kingdom of Fruit," and it is easy to see why. Because the island is warm and sunny, fruit grows well all year. In summer, markets are full of sweet mangoes from Tainan and big, juicy watermelons. In winter, people peel tangerines while they watch TV at home.

Some fruits are easy to find all year. Guava is a favorite snack for students because it is cheap and crunchy. Papaya is often made into papaya milk, a popular drink at night markets. Pineapple is special too. In Taiwanese, its name sounds like "good luck comes," so people put pineapples in their homes during the Lunar New Year.

Vegetables are also important in Taiwanese kitchens. Cabbage is in almost every stir-fry, and sweet corn is sold on a stick at night markets. Many families even grow their own vegetables on their balconies. So next time you visit, do not just eat fried chicken. Try the fruit and vegetables. They are the real taste of Taiwan!
