The Wall of Colors

彩色的牆

Nina's school had an old gray wall by the gate. Nobody liked it. One day, the art teacher, Mr. Wu, asked the class, 'What color should this wall be?' Everyone shouted a different answer. Some said blue like the sea. Some said green like the mountains. Nina said nothing. She was thinking.

That night, Nina drew a plan at home. She wanted a big sun in golden yellow, an orange sky, and purple hills. On the hills, there would be a brown cat and a little white dog. 'Taiwan is full of colors,' she wrote at the bottom. 'Our wall should be, too.'

The next week, the whole class painted the wall together. It took three days. Their hands and shoes turned pink, red, and black. When they finished, the old wall looked like a happy picture book. Now visitors stop and take photos. Nina still smiles every time she walks past it.
