Job Day Brings Real Workers to School

職業日把真正的工作者帶進校園

TAIPEI, May 16. On Friday, Daan Junior High School held its first Job Day. Twelve parents came to school to talk about their work. Students did not need to sit in a classroom all day. Instead, they walked from room to room and met a nurse, a mechanic, a farmer, a lawyer, and even a magician.

The most popular room belonged to Mr. Chen, a mechanic. He brought a scooter engine and let students take it apart. "A mechanic uses his hands and his head," he said. Next door, Ms. Huang, a reporter, showed how she writes a news story in one hour. In the garden, Mr. Wu, a farmer from Yilan, taught students how to plant rice. Many students said they had never touched mud before.

The principal said the school will hold Job Day every year. "Students should see many kinds of jobs before they choose one," she said. A ninth grader, Amy Lin, agreed. "I wanted to be a doctor," she said. "Now I also think about being an engineer. Today changed my mind." Next year's Job Day will invite a pilot and a police officer.
