Grandpa's Treasure Box

爺爺的寶盒

Grandpa kept an old wooden box under his bed. It was his secret, and nobody could touch it. One rainy afternoon, Mei was bored. She sat on the floor and looked at the box. "Is there treasure inside?" she asked. Grandpa smiled and sat down next to her. "Yes," he said. "But not the kind you think."

He opened the box slowly. Inside, there was no gold or money. There was an old train ticket, a small stone, and a black-and-white photo. The ticket was from his first trip to Taipei. The stone came from the shore near his old home. In the photo, a young man and a young woman stood under a tree. "That was our wedding day," Grandpa said in a soft voice. "Your grandma was so beautiful."

Mei looked at each thing for a long time. Every one of them had a story. Then she understood the truth. The real treasure was not the things. It was the memories inside them. That night, Mei found an empty box in her room. She put her first movie ticket inside. It was the first step of her own treasure box.
