Student Artists Light Up an Old Train Station

學生藝術家點亮老火車站

TAICHUNG, May 12 -- An old train station that stood empty for ten years has been turned into a gallery for young artists. The exhibition, titled "Tracks of Imagination," opened on Saturday with a short ceremony attended by the mayor, several art critics, and more than two hundred students and parents.

The show presents works created by senior high school students from across central Taiwan. Visitors who walk through the main hall first see a huge canvas painted by a group of students from Taichung Girls' Senior High School. It shows the goddess Mazu riding a high-speed train, a creative mix of folk belief and contemporary life. Nearby, wooden figures carved by students at a vocational school tell a fable about a greedy fox, and each figure wears a tiny costume made of recycled cloth.

The organizers said the idea came from a simple question: where do teenagers find inspiration? "Most of them told us that their inspiration comes from daily life, not from museums," explained Ms. Chen Yu-ting, the art teacher who organized the event. "So we asked them to exhibit what they see every day." The result includes illustrations of night markets, a fantasy comic about a dancer who lives inside the MRT, and a short animated film with a surprising ending.

Critics have praised the station's architecture as the perfect setting. "The high ceiling and the old iron beams make every drawing look alive," wrote one reviewer in a local newspaper. The best piece, chosen by visitors, will receive an award of NT$10,000 at the closing ceremony on June 30. The exhibition is open daily from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., and admission is free for students.
